

About the Authors

Christopher Ankersen is Clinical Associate Professor at the Center for Global Affairs, where he teaches in the Transnational Security concentration. Prior to joining NYU, he worked for the United Nations, where he served in Bangkok, Thailand (2012-2017) and at the UN Assistance to the Khmer Rouge Trials in Phnom Penh, Cambodia (2010-2012). He is a member of the Regional Consultative Group for Asia and the Pacific on Civil-Military Coordination in Disaster Relief; a Senior Research Fellow at the German-Southeast Asian Center of Excellence for Public Policy and Good Governance (CPG), Faculty of Law, Thammasat University, Thailand; and a Senior Fellow at the Canadian International Council. He is co-founder of the NYU Project on Armed Forces and Society. His research interests include civil military relations, strategic studies, international security, and crisis/disaster response. He holds a BA (Hons) in International Politics and History from Royal Roads Military College (Canada) and an MSc and PhD in International Relations from the London School of Economics and Political Science.

M. Najib Azca is a lecturer in the Department of Sociology and a researcher at the Center for Security and Peace Studies at the University of Gadjah Mada (UGM) in Yogyakarta, Indonesia. He has served as Vice Dean for Research, Cooperation, Community Services and Alumni Affairs for the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences at the UGM. He holds an MA from Australian National University and a PhD from the Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research. His research expertise is in the sociology of conflict, with a particular focus on youth radicalization in Indonesia.

Jayeel Cornelio is Associate Professor and the Director of the Development Studies Program at the Ateneo de Manila University. He is also an associate editor of the journal Social Sciences and Missions (published by Brill). The broad theme of his work is religion and social change in the Philippines. His scholarly writings have appeared in a number of edited volumes and leading journals (including Social Compass, Religion, State & Society, and Politics, Religion & Ideology). He is the author of Being Catholic in the Contemporary Philippines: Young People Reinterpreting Religion (2016), which has been featured in a book symposium by the Journal of World Christianity. He is also the editor of Rethinking Filipino Millennials: Alternative Perspectives on a Misunderstood Generation (2020).

Amy Freedman is department chair and professor of political science at Pace University, NYC. She is also a senior research scholar at the Weatherhead East Asian Institute, Columbia University. She earned her MA and PhD at New York University. Her work looks at Southeast Asia, with a particular focus on Indonesia and Malaysia. Her most recent book Nontraditional Security Threats in Southeast Asia is co-authored with Ann Marie Murphy. She is a co-editor of Asian Security and the author of numerous journal articles relating to political economy questions, minority politics, and questions about political Islam. Her work appears in Journal of Civil Society, Religion and Politics, World Affairs, and elsewhere.

Hakimul Ikhwan is a lecturer at the Department of Sociology and researcher at the Centre for Population and Policy Studies at the University of Gadjah Mada in Yogyakarta, Indonesia. He holds a PhD from the Department of Sociology at the University of Essex UK (2015) and was a research fellow at the Harvard Kennedy School in 2013-2014.

Wahyu Kustiningsih is a lecturer in the Department of Sociology, Faculty of Social and Political Sciences, University of Gadjah Mada in Yogyakarta, Indonesia. Her research focuses on Social Demography, Migration, Labor, Environment, Social Network, and Mixed-Methods (Quantitative and Qualitative). Since 2018, she has been a manager of the Unit of Research, Publication, and Community Service in the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences at the University of Gadjah Mada.

Danielle N. Lussier is Associate Professor of Political Science at Grinnell College. Her research focuses on democratization, political participation, and religion and politics, with geographic expertise on post-communist Eurasia and Indonesia. She earned her BA in Russian and East European Studies from Wesleyan University and MA and PhD in political science from the University of California, Berkeley. She is the author of Constraining Elites in Russia and Indonesia: Political Participation and Regime Survival (Cambridge University Press, 2016) and The Many Faces of Political Islam: Religion and Politics in Muslim Societies (with Mohammed Ayoob, University of Michigan Press, forthcoming 2020). Her work has also been published in

Journal of Democracy, Religion & Politics, Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion, Problems of Post-Communism, Post-Soviet Affairs, and Slavic Review. She is currently working on a book project that examines the relationship between religious practice and political participation among Muslims and Christians in Yogyakarta, Indonesia.

Ia Denise Arnette Marañon is PhD candidate at Ateneo de Manila University. She is a labor and indigenous rights activist and writer.

Ioana Emy Matesan is Assistant Professor of Government and Tutor in the College of Social Studies at Wesleyan University. Her research focuses on contentious politics and Islamist movements, with a particular interest in Middle East politics, democratization, and political violence. Her book project explores why Islamist groups adopt or abandon violent tactics, with a focus on Egypt and Indonesia. She also works on the impact of inclusion and exclusion on Islamist tactics, the possibility of negotiating with armed Islamist groups, how armed non-state actors respond to mistakes, and Hamas and the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Her articles have appeared in Studies in Conflict and Terrorism, Terrorism and Political Violence, Journal of Strategic Security, Nations and Nationalism, and are forthcoming in Journal of Global Security Studies and International Negotiations. She holds a BA in Political Science and Economics from Monmouth College, a MA in Political Science from Arizona State University, and a PhD in Political Science from Syracuse University.

William (“Billy”) Noseworthy is an Assistant Professor of Asian History at McNeese State University in Lake Charles, Louisiana. After completing his dissertation at the University of Wisconsin-Madison in Southeast Asian History, he has been at work on his current book project, tentatively titled Gods of the Soil: The Continuous Creolizations of Cham Communities in Southeast Asia. His research and writing have been supported by programs affiliated with the Mellon Foundation, the Council of American Overseas Research Centers-Center for Khmer Studies, and the Social Science Research Council, as well as the University of Wisconsin and the University of Louisiana systems. Inspired by interdisciplinary collaborative research projects with colleagues in Southeast Asian Studies, his publications include a co-authored article on the role of Vietnamese labor on rubber plantations in southern Laos in the Singapore Journal of Tropical Geography, an article on the history of transmission and formulation of Hip Hop movements in the transpacific region in Transfers: Journal of Mobility Studies, and a book chapter on Vietnam's deliberations on Biển Đông (the "Eastern Sea" or the "South China Sea") in China & Southeast Asia in the Xi Jinping Era (eds. Lim & Cibulka, Lexington Books, 2019).

Susy Tekunan is a lecturer of International Relations at the Universitas Pelita Harapan (UPH) in Tangerang, Indonesia. Prior to (UPH) she worked as an international journalist at the Voice of America in Washington, D.C. covering humanitarian and political issues for multimedia publication including TV, radio, and the internet. She holds an MBA from Radford University in Virginia and a MA in Political Science from NYU. Her research interest is on China and the U.S. international politics issues, ASEAN, and Indonesian politics.