

Department of Gerontology

FRANK J. MANNING CERTIFICATE IN GERONTOLOGY

This undergraduate program focuses on direct care, research, social and public policy, and advocacy to improve the growing network of aging-related programs and services. Our graduates are working professionals that respond to the needs of the growing number of older people in our society.

Six-course program

Recognized by the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education

Nationwide networking
and career advancement opportunities

Department of Gerontology

Manning Certificate in Gerontology

Online Undergraduate Certificate for a Career in the Field of Aging

The Frank J. Manning Certificate in Gerontology provides students with an understanding of the aging network and aging process through direct service, research, field placements, and advocacy for older adults. Since 1980, the Manning Certificate has equipped students with the skills and resources necessary to build rewarding careers in the field of aging. For those already employed in the field, this certificate provides the credentials to help you advance. A bachelor's degree is not required.

Contact us:

gerontology@umb.edu

617.287.7338

linkedin.com/company/umassgerontology

Career Opportunities

- Advocacy and Policy Change
- Transportation and Housing
- Nonprofit Management
- Financial Services
- Community Programming
- Care Management