

Department of Gerontology

Gerontology PhD

Advanced work in gerontology is interdisciplinary, bridging theories, concepts, and research methods drawn from the social and behavioral sciences. UMass Boston's Gerontology PhD Program is designed to prepare students for leadership roles as educators, researchers, planners, and policymakers.

Over 115 graduates!

1 in 5 gerontology PhDs is a graduate of the UMass Boston PhD Program in Gerontology.

The only gerontology
doctoral program in the Northeast

EST. 1990

One of the first
gerontology PhD
programs in the world

Department of Gerontology

What Can You Do with a PhD in Gerontology?

A PhD in gerontology opens many career paths. As a researcher, you can study any number of aging-related topics, such as family dynamics, retirement, employment, transportation, housing, pensions, volunteerism, health, and long-term services and supports. As an educator, you can teach undergraduate, master's, or doctoral-level courses related to the social and psychological aspects of aging, policy, and politics. You can collaborate with health care professionals, urban planners, public officials, and program administrators to improve services that enhance our lives as we age. You can make an impact.

Contact us:

gerontology@umb.edu

617.287.7338

@gerontologyumb