THE HORSE DISEASE.

The Streets Deserted and Business Brought to a Standstill.

All Omnibus and Street-Car Travel Suspended.

Pedestrianism the Most Fashionable Mode of Transit.

The Steam-Cars Coming to the Rescue on Saturday.

The present condition of the horses in this city.

Incidents of the Disease at Other Points.

The horse disease spread like wildfire in Filins, the outbreak occurring on Thursday. The disease, which has not previously been seen in Filins, has spread rapidly and many horses have already died. The government has declared martial law in the town and the military has been called in to control the situation. The disease has also been reported in several other towns in the region, and the government has appealed for assistance from neighboring countries.

On the other hand, in the city of Chicago, the situation is somewhat different. While a few cases have been reported, the disease has not spread as rapidly as in Filins. The government has taken steps to control the situation, and the military has been deployed to help. The disease has also been reported in several other towns in the region, and the government has appealed for assistance from neighboring countries.

In addition to the two cases in Filins and Chicago, a few cases have been reported in other towns in the region. The government has taken steps to control the situation, and the military has been deployed to help. The disease has also been reported in several other towns in the region, and the government has appealed for assistance from neighboring countries.

The disease is caused by a virus that is contracted by horses through contact with infected animals. The government has advised horse owners to keep their horses confined to their stables and to avoid contact with other horses. The government has also advised horse owners to keep their horses on a diet of hay and to avoid feeding them corn or other grains that might be contaminated with the disease. The government has also advised horse owners to keep their horses clean and to avoid contact with infected animals. The government has also advised horse owners to keep their horses on a diet of hay and to avoid feeding them corn or other grains that might be contaminated with the disease. The government has also advised horse owners to keep their horses clean and to avoid contact with infected animals.