The hand of my toy was already kind of broken because my cat always chews it at night. My cat name is chip. Chip loves everything that is soft and he will fight with them and bite them to show his power. That's all small cat like to do to show his power. My toy has a pink pat on his hand. I always pinch them when I was boring. They were more fluffy and different texture compared with the surrounding. I tried to fix his hand several times. But didn't turns really well. Because chip always does the exactly destroy after I fix them. For now, I gave up for fixing them. It's good unless the cotton leak out. And I hope my chip can get on well with my toy.
