

Elias Paulson
IDS 2
March 9th, 2015

Theatre of the Oppressed Exercise

I think that the most useful thing that could be done as a moderator was to calm the two individuals down, and allowing each of them time to say what they feel without talking over each other. My ideal resolution for this scenario would be for them to take time alone to think about their relationship and agree to meet up and continue the discussion later, in public. As a moderator, coming in without much background on the relationship, the best thing to do is just suggest a better location and scenario to discuss the issue (one where the girlfriend doesn't feel frightened).