

The Social Justice Film Series is an event hosted by the Social Justice Living Learning Community that screens various movies that address social justice issues such as immigration, racism, toxic masculinity and socioeconomic disparities. They seek to use the films as a platform for students to begin discussing the difficult topics displayed in the films.

Events

The series screens between 5 and 7 films each semester. Some previous movies have been: She's Beautiful When She's Angry, Fruitvale Station, I Am Not Your Negro, After Stonewall, and 13th.
