Frequently Asked Questions

How are the individual and club competitions different?

The individual program is a completely virtual experience focusing on how to communicate about agriculture confidently and effectively online. Students receive guidance from industry experts and farmer mentors on how to write blog posts, create viral social media posts, design eye-catching infographics, and so much more. The club program provides guidance and resources for students to host virtual or in-person events on their campus and in their local communities to engage with peers about agriculture.

Can I compete in both the individual and club competitions?

Yes! The individual and club programs are completely separate, but students are welcome to participate as individuals and with their club or class.

Does my major or club need to be agriculture-related?

No! The only requirement is to be passionate about sharing positive, factual information about animal agriculture.

What can I win?

Throughout the program, individual participants can win mini scholarship prizes and bonus points. At the end of the program, the students with the most points receive scholarship money. Clubs and classes with the most points at the end of the program receive scholarship money as well. In 2024, the Alliance awarded $20,000 to students and clubs.

When is the deadline to sign up?

The 2025 program kicks off on September 8. To have the most time to plan your events and participate in kick-off festivities, you should sign up before the kickoff date!
