University Working Group charge

- What is the optimal centralized organizational structure for graduate and professional education at UD at this time?
- What is the optimal leadership and governance structure?
- What is the optimal organization of staff and staff/student ratio?
- Would interdisciplinary graduate programs be managed more efficiently centrally?
- Should non-academic as well as academic support services for graduate students be centralized in a graduate college or school?
- Should online education (undergraduate as well as graduate, blended/hybrid as well as fully online) be managed through the graduate college or school?
- What resources will be required to launch a graduate college or school at UD and support substantial expansion of graduate enrollment?

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

Graduate School Mission

The Graduate School leads a collaborative effort to:

- Promote high quality education across campus at both the graduate and undergraduate levels
- Support innovation and excellence in all graduate programs
- Provide the academic and financial support required to attract and retain a diverse, highly qualified student body
- Ensure degree completion as well as professional preparation for a wide range of careers

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

Graduate Students Contribute to the UNC Mission

- The research mission
  - Work force; innovation; funding
  - Important economic impact
- The teaching mission
  - Teaching assistants and laboratory/recitation instructors for undergraduates
  - Graduate Research Consultants
- Role models and mentors for our undergraduate students
  - In the classroom, the laboratory and the field

LGS at a glance

EMORY

- Centralized graduate school
- More than 1,800 students (second highest number of students among all of Emory's schools)
- Over 45 degree programs
- 85% of graduate population is doctoral
- More than 1,000 scholars and researchers make up LGS graduate faculty, from almost every school at Emory as well as partner institutions in Atlanta and beyond
- Significant research opportunities with Emory partners such as CDC, The Carter Center, Georgia CTSA

Our mission is to:

- ❑ Provide broadly based, excellent graduate education that supports the research and scholarship of students, faculty, and the university as a whole;
- ❑ Foster an environment of inclusion to ensure the range of educational benefits that can only come from diversity across the academic community;
- ❑ Preparing our graduates for success through contemporary professional development and career planning resources and programming;
- ❑ Increase the visibility of graduate education nationally and internationally through advocacy.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT AND CAREER PLANNING

RESOURCE

Use the Professional Development and Career Planning (PDCP) timeline to help guide your preparation throughout the stages of your graduate career, from pre-candidacy to your final year.

PDCP Timeline

Graduate education is a stepping stone to a professional career, whether in education, public service or private enterprise.

At LGS, we fully recognize the profound impact that the right professional development resources can have on students. We offer a range of professional development and career planning programming that encourages students to develop their professional skills and to engage with broader professional communities.

We invite you to take advantage of programming designed to help you:

- Sharpen your professional skills related to grant writing, communicating your research, teaching and more;
- Explore careers within the academy and beyond the professoriate, and connect with successful alumni who have used their degrees to great professional success;
- Manage the job search through advanced preparation and a plan to navigate the search process;
- Explore fellowship and grant opportunities, from advanced fellowships offered by LGS and Emory

OUR COMMITMENT TO DIVERSITY

Laney Statement on Diversity

Diversity and community are of highest priority to Emory University and the Laney Graduate School. Diversity and community are fundamental to our commitment to graduate education that provides students with deep expertise in their chosen fields, creativity to cross disciplinary boundaries, and courage to take on the most important and complex problems of our time.

We strive to create and strengthen an inclusive, respectful, and intellectually challenging environment that embraces individual difference. We are committed to proactively cultivating and sustaining an academic community that engages diverse intellectual capacity and that values open dialogue, cooperation, shared responsibility, mutual respect, and cultural competence – the driving forces that enrich and enhance innovative research and scholarship.

GOVERNANCE

The Dean of the Laney Graduate School is advised by a faculty governance system composed of the Directors of Graduate Study, an elected Executive Council. The school is also represented in the broader university governance system. Below are the current members.

LANEY GRADUATE SCHOOL EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

The Executive Council is an elected body of nine members that acts as a whole in accordance with the Faculty Governance documents. The Council meets monthly, and meetings are chaired by the Dean. Proposals for new courses or programs, and for changes to existing ones, must be added to the Executive Council agenda, proposals must be submitted two weeks prior to the meeting date. Graduate school students are invited to attend the council meetings. To ensure timely review, new or changed courses to be added to the Executive Council prior to the January meeting. Please submit a full agenda, and proposals submitted late in the spring semester will not be considered for the next year.

If you have questions about the Executive Council or want to be added to the agenda, contact Senior Associate Dean Cathryn Johnson at cjohnson@emory.edu. Members of the Executive Council serve three year terms.

Summary of CGS consultants' recommendations for UD

A. Organization and Administrative Structure of Graduate/Professional Education

1. Establish a Graduate College – importance and value of this for advancing in the rankings of research universities
2. Leadership: dean with a vice provost title – authority and responsibility for leveraging resources across the university to promote excellence in all programs, and holding programs accountable for outcomes; importance of mutually collaborative and supportive partnership with each of the deans of the other colleges
3. Personnel and financial resources: centralize positions to eliminate redundancy of function and inefficiencies in the academic colleges related to support for graduate education to begin to address resource needs of new unit
4. Professional and Continuing Education (“a regional treasure”) should be a full partner within the Graduate College to assist with revenue-generation for doctoral programs and regional/global outreach via continued expansion of online master’s programming

5. Identify/create a dedicated space for graduate student activities – and leverage graduate student leadership capacity in the formation of the Graduate College
6. Charge the Graduate College with assessing and benchmarking graduate curricula and co-curricular professional development and career planning - and guiding resource allocation toward achievement of 21st century best practices in graduate and professional education
7. Drive the achievement of 21st century best practices in diversity recruitment, retention, mentoring, timely graduation and student success in all graduate programs through the Graduate College
8. Ensure contemporary and high value interdisciplinary contributions of graduate programs to the University's strategic priorities through the Graduate College

B. Assessment and Analysis of Student Funding/Graduate Assistants

1. Either centralize all graduate assistantships in the Graduate College OR authorize the Graduate College to partner with the academic colleges and central administration in aligning resource allocation with quality outcomes and national best practices in graduate and professional education
2. Increase internal funding packages for doctoral students to improve competition for best students
3. Decrease internal funding allocations for master's students and develop an integrated business plan for master's programming that includes revenue streams for doctoral students
4. Achieve greater transparency/clarity in tuition discounting and merit award opportunities

From “Summary” of CGS consultant’s report:

University of Delaware 2017 Doctoral Hooding

With the arrival of President Assanis, the University of Delaware has gained extraordinary momentum to continue its rise upward as a transformative research university.

There is widespread agreement that the establishment of a Graduate College is key to advancing UD’s contributions to research, scholarship, innovation and discovery.

Graduate education thrives where there is emphasis on student success and the essential role of mentoring and inclusion. Graduate students, by virtue of their preparation and motivation seek innovation, question intellectual boundaries and work beyond disciplinary borders. Graduate and professional students in the 21st century have a keen appetite for incorporating global perspectives and desire learning in a variety of settings. Taken together, these “graduate assets” will provide great dividends to the mission and goals now established for the University of Delaware.

Mohamed Bah had no thought of pursuing a doctoral degree as a high school student. He crossed academia's ultimate finish line in May 2017 with a Ph.D. and master's degree in material sciences and engineering. His research focus is on polycrystalline nanoparticles.

Thank you
