Punishment and Society ~ Spring 2020

Professor: Chrysanthi Leon, JD, PhD
E-Mail: santhi@udel.edu
Tuesdays 6-9 PM Old College Room 325 (no class March 31st)

Required Readings are indicated in the schedule

You must bring the assigned readings with you to each class (in print or on a device). The assigned books (listed in order assigned) have been ordered through the college bookstore and are easily available to order through your favorite bookseller.

Sykes, G. M. (2007). The society of captives: A study of a maximum security prison. Princeton University Press. (originally published 1958—any version is ok)

Reiter, K. (2016). 23/7: Pelican Bay prison and the rise of long-term solitary confinement. Yale University Press.

Rhodes, L. A. (2004). Total confinement: Madness and reason in the maximum security prison. Univ of California Press.

In addition, I will provide loaner copies of my edited volume:

Hail-Jares, K., Shdaimah, C. S., & Leon, C. S. (Eds.). (2017). Challenging perspectives on street-based sex work. Temple University Press.

The additional assigned articles are available on Canvas, which I will go over during our first class.

Grading

Grading will be based on a combination of short writing assignments, class participation, and a final paper. Grades will be assigned for the following percentages: 100-90=A, 89=B+, 88-80=B, 79=C+, 78-70=C, 69-60=D, 59 and below=F. Each component will be given the following weight in your final grade:

Short writing assignments	45%
Class participation	25%
Take home exam or Final Paper	30%

Course Policies

In-class writing and other writing to learn

We all make sense of ideas differently, and for some of you writing about your own experiences, or creating poems or other fiction, may help you gain a deeper understanding of the work. At times I will provide prompts for short in-class writing assignments that you may choose to build on for inclusion in your portfolio (see below).

Reading Analysis & Participation

Students will engage in active reading and discussion.

Prepare for class by doing the reading and by preparing a written explanation of the most important points made in the reading. This should include identification of

- a key quote
- the argument/main idea
- method and data
- and implications

You will only need to be prepared to share or turn in your quote and an analytical question for each reading, but you should have written notes on each of the above points that you can use to have a good conversation in class.

Students will be prepared to be called on in class and to speak briefly about their questions or quotes, and to address the main ideas of the assigned reading (e.g. what was the author's argument? How does this relate to the last class discussion? Were you convinced by their analysis?). Even if class time is rarely used for this exercise, students are always expected to be prepared for it.

Note that you cannot receive the full participation credit (25% of your course grade) unless you have a good track record of consistently speaking up in class.

I have high expectations of your ability to keep up with the readings—generally we will cover material in class from the readings listed for that day on the schedule (e.g. you should have read the assignment for January 7 before class that day). I will give pop quizzes on occasion to be certain everyone is keeping up with the reading.

Universal Learning

I am committed to the principle of universal learning. This means that our classroom, our virtual spaces, our practices, and our interactions be as inclusive as possible. Mutual respect, civility, and the ability to listen and observe others carefully are crucial to universal learning.

Any student with particular needs may contact the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) Office for students with physical or emotional disabilities and/or the Academic Enrichment Center (AEC) for students with learning disabilities or ADHD, at the start of the semester. Their office will forward any necessary information to me. You and I can work out the details of any accommodations needed for this course.

Participation & Attendance

Participation accounts for a great deal of your course grade, and if you are absent you cannot participate (there are no "make-ups"). Thus, a student who misses more than three classes is unlikely to receive full credit. Note that films will be shown frequently, and guest speakers may join the class—this does not exempt students from regular participation responsibilities.

Per the University's policy on scheduling conflicts, you must notify me in writing by the second week of class of any conflicts relating to athletics, professional interviews, or other events which will require your absence.

Absences due to illness do not be substantiated with a doctor's note or dean's excuse UNLESS you will be requesting an incomplete for the course (not needed for individual assignments) You must simply accept from the outset that no matter how justified, any absences may impact your grade.

Class attendance is required except for excused absences. For the specific policy regarding excused absences see <http://www.udel.edu/provost/fachb/III-1-1-attendance.html>

Class Discussion

Some of you may not be accustomed to discussion-based classes, and therefore not realize the importance of class discussions for doing well on the essays. The topics I focus on and the questions I pose for discussion are pivotal for knowing how to write the short essays. If you have not written notes during the class discussions, you'll have missed a crucial resource.

Should we have to cancel class for weather or other reasons, a one-page assignment (typically a reading response or short online research project) will be posted on Canvas for you to complete and submit.

In class we will establish ground rules for courteous and considerate discussion--something which is especially important for emotionally-charged subjects like crime and punishment. In addition to the ground rules we establish, keep in mind the difference between offering an opinion grounded in relevant experience (which is often extremely useful) to sharing personal stories which may be uncomfortable or distracting. These rules shall apply to both in-class and virtual discussions.

Feel free to give your notes to a student who missed a class. But do not sell, give away, or otherwise make public the notes taken in my class on any of the various websites that facilitate this (or any other way that this is done). My class plans and comments are my intellectual property and are not for sale unless I sell them.

Academic Integrity, Plagiarism & Academic Dishonesty

Please familiarize yourself with UD policies regarding academic dishonesty. To falsify the results of one's research, to steal the words or ideas of another, to cheat on an assignment, to re-submit the same assignment for different classes, or to allow or assist another to commit these acts corrupts the educational process. Students are expected to do their own work and neither give nor receive unauthorized assistance.

Proper citation includes both direct quotes and paraphrasing—both require including some reference to the author, year of publication, and page number (or description of scene in the case of films). You will be marked down for failing to abide by this.

“It is the official policy of the University of Delaware that all acts or attempted acts of alleged student academic dishonesty be reported to the Office of Judicial Affairs. At the faculty member's discretion and with the concurrence of the student or students involved, some cases, though reported to the Office of Judicial Affairs, may be resolved within the confines of the course. All others will be adjudicated within the Undergraduate Student Judicial System.” <http://www.udel.edu/provost/fachb/III-1-d-dishonesty.html>

This applies to posts on Canvas, group work, as well as traditional tests and assignments. In addition, I am very strict about reporting all incidents to the Office of Judicial Affairs— on average, I report one student per semester:

Complete details of the university's academic integrity policies and procedures can be found at <http://www1.udel.edu/studentconduct/policyref.html> Office of Student Conduct, 218 Hullihen Hall, (302) 831-2117. E-mail: student-conduct@udel.edu

Short writing assignments & Take home exam

Short assignments and the take home exam are posted on Canvas under the assignments tab. You must thoroughly support your answers with concrete, detailed examples from the course materials, which may include films, class lectures and discussions as well as readings. All such materials must be cited with the material title, page number or date viewed/discussed. If you would prefer to write a final paper, contact me no later than April 15 to confirm the topic.

Make up work/additional extra credit: you may choose to write one additional essay (with a maximum of four submissions) to improve your grade.

Proper citation includes both direct quotes and paraphrasing—both require including some reference to the author, year of publication, and page number (or description of scene in the case of films). You will be marked down for failing to abide by this.

Harassment and Discrimination

The University of Delaware works to promote an academic and work environment that is free from all forms of discrimination, including harassment. As a member of the community, your rights, resource and responsibilities are reflected in the non-discrimination and sexual misconduct policies. Please familiarize yourself with these policies at <http://www.udel.edu/oei> . You can report any concerns to the University's Office of Equity & Inclusion, at 305 Hullihen Hall, (302) 831-8063 or you can report anonymously through UD Police (302) 831-2222 or the EthicsPoint Compliance Hotline at <http://www1.udel.edu/compliance>. You can also report any violation of UD policy on harassment, discrimination, or abuse of any person at this site: <http://sites.udel.edu/sexualmisconduct/how-to-report/>

Disclosures of Instances of Sexual Misconduct

For information on Sexual Misconduct policies, where to get help, and how to report information, please refer to www.udel.edu/sexualmisconduct. At UD, we provide 24-hour crisis assistance and victim advocacy and counseling. Contact 302-831-1001, UD Helpline 24/7/365, to get in touch with a sexual offense support advocate.

Inclusion of Diverse Learning Needs

Any student who thinks he/she may need an accommodation based on a disability should contact the Office of Disability Support Services (DSS) office as soon as possible. The DSS office is located at 240 Academy Street, Alison Hall Suite 130, Phone: 302-831-4643, fax: 302-831-3261, DSS Website (<http://www.udel.edu/DSS/>). You may contact DSS at dssoffice@udel.edu

Non-Discrimination

The University of Delaware does not discriminate against any person on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, gender identity or expression, sexual orientation, genetic information, marital status, disability, religion, age, veteran status or any other characteristic protected by applicable law in its employment, educational programs and activities, admissions policies, and scholarship and loan programs as required by Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and other applicable statutes and University policies. Getting in touch with me

Although I will eventually respond to every email message you send me, this is not the fastest way to reach me: in-person communication is best. I will try to be available before and after class, so please feel free to come up and chat and to stop by my office hours. You don't need to have a particular question; I would be glad just to hear more about your interests.

I will rely on our Canvas webpage to communicate with you about both substance and procedure. I may use Canvas or Zoom for online office hours and to answer your questions about the substance of the course. Pressing issues should be brought to my attention in person.

ACADEMIC HONESTY: University policies on academic honesty apply to all work done in this class. For specific policy, see <http://www.udel.edu/judicialaffairs/policyref.html>
