

Aaron Holmes

Bio

Aaron Holmes is the Deputy General Counsel and Senior Managing Director at Accenture, where he leads Accenture's Mergers & Acquisitions legal group. Aaron is responsible for global acquisitions, dispositions and minority investments. Aaron also leads Corporate Finance for legal, where he is responsible for the firm's filings with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, as well as legal support for the firm's tax and treasury functions.

Prior to his current role, Aaron had a variety of senior leadership roles within the firm's Finance and Legal organizations, including as the global head of strategic tax planning and tax controversy. Prior to joining Accenture, Aaron was a corporate attorney with Cravath, Swaine Moore and Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, both in New York City.

Aaron lives in Philadelphia with his wife, Catherine, and two children, Louisa and William.