Meet the Munson Fellows

What is a Munson Fellow?

Munson Fellows are peer mentors who help you adjust to college life and make sure that you are doing well academically, personally, and socially.

They help connect you with resources and activities on campus, as well as direct you to faculty or staff that can give more in-depth answers to certain questions. As upper-division leaders in the Honors College, Munson Fellows help facilitate the first-year experience. You'll see them planning section events or larger building wide events such as Dr. Munson's Study Breaks, the New Student Kick-off, and Faculty Chats. Ultimately, Munson Fellows are an essential part of the living learning community who love connecting and working with our first-year students.

Munson Fellows are named for Dr. Burnaby Munson, who was an influential chemistry professor at UD. He was also instrumental in creating the Honors experience. Dr. Munson instituted Wednesday night study breaks and left a generous fund for faculty engagement activities to continue.

Come out to the New Student Kick-off tomorrow to meet all of the Munson Fellows!
