

School of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences Student Ambassador Program

The School of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences (HRS) Student Ambassador Program is a volunteer opportunity for HRS undergraduate and graduate students to assist in the recruitment of prospective students and promotion of the school.

Student Ambassadors will have the opportunity to:

- Be featured on the HRS website
- Conduct HRS facility tours for student visits
- Meet with prospective students and families to answer questions about HRS programs, our school and The Ohio State University
- Participate in recruitment campaigns (i.e. phone, email or letter writing)
- Represent HRS at recruitment events and engage with prospective students

As a HRS ambassador, you will receive unique opportunities to work on transferable skills such as team work, public speaking and time management. Serving as a student ambassador will improve your ability to work with diverse groups, as well as demonstrate to employers your motivation and competency as a potential leader.

Required Qualifications:

- Currently enrolled in a HRS major
- In good academic standing at the university and in HRS major
- Passionate about discussing current major in HRS, as well as the school and university experiences

Desired Qualifications:

- Exhibit professionalism while interacting with students, families, faculty and staff
- Experience working with diverse groups
- Strong communication skills

Application Process

- Typically held in Spring and Summer semesters – if you have any questions about the program please contact Breanna Falb - falb.12@osu.edu
