

DIET LISTS

IMPORTANT DISCLAIMERS:

1. These lists are meant to be teaching tools. These lists are not all-encompassing; if you need or want additional nutrients, please use product guides or contact the respective companies to get more information.
2. Dry and canned versions of a diet can have different nutrient profiles.
3. Different flavors of a diet can have different nutrient profiles.
4. These lists were updated in August 2025. Nutrient profiles can change often, so these lists may be outdated within 6-12 months.
5. Abbreviations:
  - TDF = Total dietary fiber; this is not the same as crude fiber. You can find crude fiber in product guides for any diets with only TDF listed.
  - Prot = protein; Phos = phosphorus; Ca = calcium; K = potassium; Cu = copper; Na = sodium
6. When dashes (--) are listed below in place of a nutrient, this information was not provided in respective product guides.
7. General guidelines for “low,” “moderate,” and “high” selected nutrient concentrations provided below. These guidelines are not meant to dictate how any specific animal or disease should be managed, but rather to provide some perspective. Nutrients are provided per 100 kcal.

Nutrient	Species	AAFCO minimum	Low	Moderate	High
Protein (g)	Canine	4.5	< 5	5 – 8	> 8
	Feline	6.5	< 7	7 – 10	> 10

Additional notes:

- All struvite/oxalate diets promote an acidic urine pH.
- There are numerous other diets that have properties to reduce the relative supersaturation (RSS) for struvite and oxalate (e.g., "S/O index," "St/Ox," "S+Ox Shield"). Please contact the Nutrition Service for more details.
