Mershon affiliate Randall Schweller, a rare international relations scholar who supports Trump, said the death of the Soviet Union and the decline of Daesh (also known as ISIS) mean "the U.S. doesn't need its allies like it used to." Now, he said, the president is free to stop allies from coasting on the benefits provided at a cost by a dominant America.

"Simply put, Trump no longer sees the necessity of keeping allies happy at the expense of the American people, so he's trying to solve the free-rider problem," Schweller, a political science professor at Ohio State University, said in an email. "The bumper-sticker line to U.S. allies: No more Uncle Sugar."

"The vote is a precious resource that we need to guard and make that we are able to express," said Mershon affiliate Paul Beck, professor emeritus of political science at Ohio State University and an expert in voting behaviors. "Sometimes state practices get in the way of that."

"He is somebody I think who is looked upon as just a common guy," said Mershon affiliate Paul Beck, professor emeritus of political science. "Biden helps and helps in the very groups Cordray needs to draw well in to be able to win the election. It's a very close race. Whoever wins the governorship will be an important person in the 2020 election and so it's very important for both Democrats and Republicans to get their person in."
