Illinois Rural Health Summit: Policy Briefs and Webinars

The pandemic laid bare major cracks in health, economic, social service and education systems but also demonstrated the great innovation in rural communities. The Department of Population Science and Policy is seeking health policy, research and community support staff with bachelor's or master's degrees with backgrounds in public health, health services, children's health and/or community health (or related fields) to join our team.

View vacancies (search for the Department of Population Science and Policy) or contact Heather Whetsell for more information.
