Health Humanities in Times of Crisis

The Smart Museum of Art invites proposals from graduate students at any institution. More Here
Submissions due by February 15, 2021

"The first annual Health Humanities Symposium at the University of Chicago will explore health in relation to crisis, where the health humanities is the study of the intersection of health, healing, and humanistic disciplines, as well as social science research that gives insight into the human condition. As we've seen throughout this past year, health is a contested personal, cultural, political, and social state, where questions of health and healing intersect with issues of race, gender, class, citizenship, art, education, and more. In this symposium, we welcome a dialogue across disciplinary and methodological boundaries with those invested in grappling with the role of humanistic work in both crises and futures of recovery, renewal, and restoration."

The Feitler Center for Academic Inquiry and the Smart Museum of Art's Department of Public Practice invite all graduate students to submit proposals in the form of artistic media, original papers, panels or workshops, and presentations.

Quick Recap of Professional Networking Event

Last Friday guest speaker Kenneth Jones, President of AMITA Health, St. Francis Hospital Evanston, shared with GPHAPers information about the American College of Healthcare Executives (ACHE), Chicago Health Executives Forum (CHEF), and his career journey. For those who were not able to make the event, the following are a few networking tips shared during the breakout session:

- 1) Go update those LinkedIn profiles! In the COVID age, students stated they have had success finding and reaching out to professionals outside their networks.
- 2) Conferences / Webinars are a great way to learn more about and connect with leaders in field.
- 3) Never underestimate the power of peer networking (esp. within our GPHAP community!).
- 4) Check out Entrepreneurial Thought Leaders (A Stanford Speak Series Podcast) - Amy Chang (Cisco) - Networking with Curiosity
- 5) Work to cultivate a diverse professional network - exposure to ideas or perspectives of individuals who are not like you or who have different backgrounds will increase your knowledge and awareness in any field!
