Faculty Spotlight – Dr. Vineet Arora Discusses How to Support COVID-19 Crisis in India

Dr. Vineet Arora, University of Chicago Medicine Hospitalist was recently named Dean of the Pritzker School of Medicine. Dr. Arora was featured in the Hyde Park Herald discussing the COVID-19 outbreak in India and ways in which members of the University of Chicago community can help.

The University of Chicago has established a website via its Center in Delhi, <http://uchicago.in/covid-19-crisis-support-in-india>, to direct aid to staff and faculty both in India alongside links where people anywhere can donate, including to the affiliated Guru Teg Bahadur Hospital Complex, through the UChicago Alumni Club in India and through two graduate students in the Department of South Asian Languages and Civilizations.

This website includes both local and international organizations to support the COVID-19 relief efforts in India!

CLASS OF 2021

This will be our last Weekly Digest of the spring quarter. To all those graduating this historically been underfunded and ignored. Despite the growing discussion across the venture capital community concerning limited funds for women founders, femtech still received only 3.3% of the total digital health funding in 2019 and 1.5% in the first half of 2020. For National Women's Health Month, three MATTER startup members — Embr Labs CEO Elizabeth Gazda, Marani Health Founder and CEO Ann Holder and Univfy Co-founder and CEO Mylene Yao — join us to discuss unmet needs in digital women's health, investment trends for these solutions and the importance and ROI of investing in women-led startups.

Fostering Clinician Well-being: Strategies to Address Pandemic Burnout

For more than a year, healthcare heroes have put their lives on the line to fight the COVID-19 pandemic. Mental Health America surveyed 1,119 healthcare workers about their mental health and well-being, and the results were resounding: 93 percent reported stress, 86 percent reported anxiety, 77 percent reported frustration, 76 percent reported exhaustion and burnout and 75 percent said they were overwhelmed.

Clinician well-being — mentally, physically and spiritually — has never been more important.

Please join MATTER and our partners Accenture, Advocate Aurora Health and the American Medical Association to discuss clinician well-being during the pandemic.

Opportunities

The Institute for Healthcare Improvement (IHI) has an education platform that can be viewed Here.

The IHI Open School for the Health Professions (free to students) features many great short courses that generally take about 90 minutes to complete. Students can upload the Certificate of Completion (no additional write-up required). Special Note: Keep a look out for a new course called Building Skills for Anti-Racism Work: Hearts, Minds and Action by Laura Botwinick and an IHI colleague Teaka Isaac. To be released very soon!
