Student Spotlight - Joe Lemna

Joe Lemna is currently in his second year at the UChicago Divinity School. Prior to attending the Divinity School, Joe worked as an AmeriCorps member as an elementary school computer teacher. Additionally, he was involved in Catholic youth ministry beforehand. He came to Divinity School to learn more about doing ministry alongside people with different faith backgrounds. This summer, he participated in Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) training at Northwestern Memorial Hospital where he enjoyed the interdisciplinary nature of the program by working with chaplains and medical professionals to further support patient needs.

Save the Date: Brown Fellows Event on Rural Mental Health - March 23

Save the Date: Info Session on Erikson/Quern Fellowships - Feb 22

Save the Date for an Information Session on the Erikson and Quern Fellowships. The info session will be on Wednesday, Feb 22 during the lunch hour from 12:30 – 1:30 pm at the Crown Family School. Come hear about GPHAP options for summer internships and hear from a few GPHAP students who held these positions last summer. (This event is an info session about the application process and the internship options; it doesn't count as a GPHAP co-curricular.) Lunch will be provided.

Joe joined GPHAP because it echoed the same interdisciplinary quality as CPE training. GPHAP creates a space for conversation to occur among people from different perspectives and backgrounds. After graduation, Joe wants to be a chaplain in a hospital setting to help people during challenging circumstances. During his career, he wants to do ministry that is interfaith to provide care to all people.

When he is not studying, Joe can be found running for the UChicago cross country and track teams!
