Martin Luther King Commemoration Celebration

In honor of Martin Luther King Jr., whose legacy resonates with justice and equality, we share a timeless quote emphasizing the importance of healthcare as a fundamental right for all.

"Of all the forms of inequality, injustice in health is the most shocking and inhuman."* - Martin Luther King

News You Can Use

The Financialization of Health in the United States | New England Journal of Medicine | by Joseph Dov Bruch, Victor Roy and Colleen M. Grogan

January 11: From early fears of a burgeoning medical-industrial complex to more recent critiques of corporate greed in medicine, observers have long decried the profit motives embedded in the U.S. health care system.

While much of the focus has been on corporate influences in health care, a critical dynamic has remained largely obscured: financialization. As defined by social scientists and historians, financialization refers to the growing influence of financial markets, motives, institutions, and elites in our economy and society. This dynamic encompasses the expanding influence of financial actors — including commercial and investment banks, private equity (PE) firms, venture capital firms, and other types of investors — and a shift in the business of non-finance-related entities away from trade and commodity production toward new financial channels and maneuvers.
